SOCIAL SUPPORT QUESTIONNAIRE

Social support is defined as having a network of people that support your endeavors, contribute positively to your decision-making processes, and are there for you when you need help. Scientists have suggested that people with this kind of network around them can transcend even the worst environments and accomplish great things. Unfortunately, people who don't have this type of network have a harder time accomplishing even modest goals. Remember this: who you are today and who you become in the future has a lot to do with who you choose to spend your time with.

The following questions are designed to assess your level of social support. Since this variable is a very important determinant of how well you'll do following any nutrition or exercise program, let's figure out, right now, how much social support you've got around you. Simply answer the questions to follow by selecting the response most appropriate to your situation. Once you've completed all the questions, your score will be calculated. And remember, be honest. You're doing this exercise to find the areas of your life that might present challenges to your progress. But be careful, once you recognize your challenges it's easy to blame them for your outcomes. Don't do this. You're in control. You have the power to place yourself in the right environment so use it!

YOUR SCORE AND WHAT IT MEANS:

20 TO 38 TOTAL POINTS

You've got a great support network around you. Of course, that's not all you'll need to succeed with a good nutrition and exercise program, but it's a great start. And even though you may have scored relatively high on this questionnaire, be sure to do your best to support those around you. Social support works both ways: in order to make sure you keep this great group of people around you, you'll have to offer support to them as well.

5 TO 19 TOTAL POINTS

It looks like you've got some social support around you but there are obviously a few areas of your life that will present challenges. Be sure to look around you and be aware of workplace challenges, at-home challenges, and relationship challenges that might stand in your way. Make sure to inventory the items in this questionnaire and come up with creative ways to improve the social environment around you.

4 TO -14 TOTAL POINTS

Your social support is lacking and needs a makeover. While some of your environment isn't conducive to your goals, there are some areas that you can latch on to. Your first step is to figure out which areas are lacking and take steps to fix them. Join a health club, dine with friends committed to health, spend time doing nonfood-related things with your other friends, and avoid the donut tray at work. And remember, although it's easy to blame those around you for not being as supportive as you'd like, choosing new exercise and nutrition goals is your own choice, not necessarily theirs. Instead of blaming them, simply come up with creative and nonantagonistic ways to enlist their support.

-15 TO -31 TOTAL POINTS

This score is quite low and therefore signals some real problems in your work and at home environments, as well as in your relationships. Of course, some people have been known to succeed in reaching their goals by going it alone. But the ability to succeed with a "lone ranger" mentality is too difficult for most to accomplish. Therefore, without some serious changes, your environment will almost certainly cause your old habits to surface. Important changes may include: having a serious talk with your friends and family in order to express to them how important this is to you, going out immediately and joining a club or group that meets for regular exercise, or finding a workout partner that is as motivated as you are. And remember, although it's easy to blame those around you for not being as supportive as you'd like, instead of blaming them, simply come up with creative and nonantagonistic ways to enlist their support. Of course, if it comes down to it, pick some new friends. Your social group is one of the most important variables in your success.
